

Life goes on

Being made redundant is never easy. Our initial reaction might be shock, denial, shame, anger, depression or all of these. For some people it feels almost like a bereavement, and it takes time to even begin to think straight about what to do.

But redundancy is not the end of the world and life goes on. This leaflet aims to help by suggesting some simple steps about what to do next, and some practical information for anyone who has not had to face this experience before.

Above all:

Don't suffer in silence.

Talk to someone about how you feel, perhaps someone who has had the same experience.

Do accept it has happened.

Don't pretend it hasn't and do get on with doing something about it.

Don't take it personally.

It's the job that has been made redundant, not you.

Do seek advice and support so you can make the next step which is right for you.

is a programme of the Churches of the county that aims to offer support to all people at work.

Our team of Workplace Chaplains regularly visits workplaces ranging from factories and offices, to supermarkets, shops and fire stations. There are Chaplains who relate particularly to the rural economy and local government.

Chaplains are there to listen, to understand the pressures of the workplace, and offer support and care where they can.

Nine simple steps

1. Don't panic.

At a time like this there are lots of thoughts and feelings crowding in, which can just be confusing. Although only you can really know what it feels like, lots of people go through the same thing so you are not alone. Find someone just to listen to how you feel. Talking about things can help cope with the confusion.

2. Make sure the paperwork is in order.

There are rules about how redundancy is handled. Your employer should consult with you about finding alternative work in the organisation. Talk to your line manager about the opportunities.

But if this is not an option, anyone who has worked for an employer for more than 2 years is entitled to a redundancy payment. For full details see www.direct.gov.uk/Employment

Ask your employer about pension rights and make sure they give you your P45 form.

3. Contact Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus now offers a one stop shop for all benefits and job search advice, bringing together the old Job Centres and Social Security offices.

To get help with looking for work, even whilst you are still employed, phone 0845 6060 234 or go to www.direct.gov.uk/Employment.

You may be eligible to receive benefit payments. To make a claim you have to wait until after you have stopped working for your employer. Filing an application is now done by phone on 0800 055 6688 or online at www.jobcentreplus.gov.uk.

An appointment will be made at your local office with a Personal Advisor to discuss finding a new job, training that is available and any other benefits you are entitled to. Take your P45 and two recent payslips when you have your initial interview.

4. Put your Redundancy pay in a safe place.

Check with the Personal Advisor at Jobcentre Plus before you spend or invest your redundancy payment as this may affect your right to benefit.

5. Check your entitlement to Housing and Council Tax assistance.

If you rent a flat or house, consult the Housing Department of the local council about a possible rent allowance. You may be entitled to Housing Benefit and you can also apply for a rebate on your Council Tax bill.

If you have a mortgage, tell your building society or lender immediately. In certain circumstances you could get help with paying your mortgage. Ask at Jobcentre Plus. Don't use your redundancy money to pay off the mortgage before seeking advice.

6. Keep track of spending.

Review any standing orders or finance contracts on purchases. If you're worried about meeting payments seek help to avoid getting into uncontrollable debt. The local Citizen's Advice Bureau offers a confidential service on managing debt (their number will be in the phone book), or ask at Jobcentre Plus for details of local support organisations in your area.

7. Keep in touch with your Trade Union.

They can offer a range of advice and support not only through the process of redundancy, but as you look for new employment. If you're not a member and you need advice ask at the Citizen's Advice Bureau.

8. Keep looking for a job.

Remember that you have valuable skills and experience. Redundancy is as much an opportunity to find a new direction in your career as it is the ending of one particular chapter of your working life.

9. Set targets and tasks

Planning your day will help give you a sense of purpose and satisfaction. Do something about that interest you have never had time to pursue. Enrol for a course at your local college or consider offering your services and skills as a volunteer – there are always plenty of groups crying out for help. Ask at your local volunteer bureau. The number will be in the phone book.
